CURRENT RESEARCH

I am currently working on a book about Frankish capitularies that reconceptualizes why this characteristic Frankish legal genre appeared and then disappeared in the early Middle Ages. Depending extensively on the manuscript evidence, the book will begin by examining the invention of the capitulary form by the Merovingians, will next explore the use of capitularies as a primary tool of rulership by the Carolingians, and will end by analyzing how and why capitularies continued to be copied in the changed circumstances of eleventh and twelfth-century Europe.
